
What next

The two days are over, but this is a beginning. Bitcoin in Africa is still early, and the people who start building now become the leaders of this ecosystem later. You do not need a special degree, a visa, wealth, or anyone's permission. You need skills, consistency, and proof of work: showing what you can do, not just saying it.

Paths you can take

- Education and community. Teach, translate, organise meetups, guide onboarding. If you can explain simply, you can lead.
- Entrepreneurship. Build Bitcoin-first products or services, and onboard merchants in your town.
- Creative and media. Tell stories, design, make short explainer videos in your own language.
- Product and operations. Keep projects organised and moving.
- Technical. Learn to build wallets and Lightning tools, and contribute to open-source.

Show your proof of work

Pick one path, pick one thing to make, and share it publicly:

- Onboard one merchant and show Lightning payments working.
- Make a simple Bitcoin explainer in your language.
- Run a small onboarding event.
- Contribute a fix to an open-source project.

This is how people find you.

Keep learning

- BitKwa Bitcoin Diploma, the full course this curriculum is drawn from.
 - PlanB Network, free Bitcoin courses: planb.network.
 - My First Bitcoin, open Bitcoin education: myfirstbitcoin.io.

Choose the path you are passionate about and give it your best.
