

Onboarding a merchant, a one-page guide

Keep this with you at the stall. Be quick, be honest, and leave the merchant able to do it without you. For the full detail, see the merchant guide and work from the merchant onboarding checklist.

The six steps

1. Explain the value. Get paid directly, low fees on Lightning, no chargebacks once confirmed, cash out to [local currency] when you want.
2. Set up receiving. Install the wallet from the official source, help them create and back up a seed phrase (they keep it), and find the Lightning address or Receive QR.
3. Do a test payment. Send a small real payment and let them watch it land on their own screen.
4. Check it arrived. Show them the wallet history so they can confirm any sale later without you.
5. Show cash-out. Walk the options that actually work here: [CONFIRM per country]. Never promise a rate.
6. Leave the signage. Place the "Bitcoin accepted here" sign and QR stand, record the merchant, and agree a follow-up.

The one-minute pitch

"You can accept Bitcoin here. Payments come straight to you, the fees are tiny, and once it is confirmed it cannot be reversed. You can change it to [local currency] the same day if you like. Setup takes a few minutes and I will do it with you now."

Rules that keep merchants

- Respect their time. If they are serving a customer, wait or come back.
- Show, do not just tell. The test payment does the convincing.
- Never touch their seed phrase. Guide them; they write it and keep it.

- Be honest about price. The price can move, which is why we show same-day cash-out.
- Follow up. Return or message to check their first customer sales and answer questions.

If they say...

- "Will I lose money if the price drops?" You can cash out the same day; you hold Bitcoin only as long as you choose.
- "Is this legal for my business?" [CONFIRM: legal and tax status per country] . Give the honest local answer.
- "A customer says they paid but I did not get it." Check the history together. No confirmation means it did not arrive.

A merchant is onboarded when the sign is up, a real payment has landed, and they can check a sale on their own.
